

Aging in America: A Conversation with Dudley Clendinen

“Clendinen has written a modern masterpiece. It isn’t about old age. It’s about all of us, a brilliant celebration of what it means to be a human being. I laughed and wept and was changed by reading A PLACE CALLED CANTERBURY. It is a gift to be shared, this wonderful, wonderful book.”

—Linda Ellerbee, NBC and Nickelodeon journalist and author

SCOPE, Selby Public Library, Senior Friendship Centers and Sarasota News & Books are pleased to announce the visit of critically-acclaimed author Dudley Clendinen to Sarasota. Clendinen will be here to talk about his newest book “A Place Called Canterbury: Tales of the New Old Age in America.”

Clendinen wrote “A Place Called Canterbury,” by living at a seniors-only apartment building in Tampa, Florida for over a year to see firsthand what it means to grow old in our society. What he found will interest anyone who has aging relatives or is wondering about his or her own old age. The event is free and open to the public, books will be for sale and the author will be available to sign copies.

Aging in America: A Conversation with Dudley Clendinen

Friday, May 9

10:00 to 11:30 am

Selby Public Library Geldbart Auditorium

“A funny, insightful view of the new old age. This often hilarious, sometimes very sad, observation on old age is always deeply respectful of the men and women experiencing it and their dedicated caretakers. This is a wise and telling book.”

—Cokie Roberts, NPR and ABC News Analyst and author of We Are Our Mother’s Daughters
